NEWS FROM COUNCIL BLUFFS.

An Iowa Citizen Describes an Indiana Fight He Witnessed.

NUMEROUS PISTOL SHOTS EXCHANGED.

Passengers Were Quite Anxious to Hide Beneath Car Seats Until the Fast Made No More.

J. G. Lemen returned last Friday from Greenville, S. C., where he went to get four children who were to be kept in the Christian home.

Chicago to Louisville he had a chance to feel the practical operations of a real, live Indiana feud, and he can't say that he has a particular about making a closer acquaintance with the animal.

Mr. Lemen's account of the affair is a very graphic one.

"I was riding along, peacefully enough, in a chair car," said he, "when suddenly the door opened and a lot of passengers came rushing in with fright depicted on their faces.

"We learned that a couple of warlike families had boarded the train and had commenced a pitched battle in the car in front of us. There were four on a side.

A distiller named Bass, about fifty years of age, and a younger man named Todd, who had married a daughter of the distiller, were the two central figures.

The wedding, it seems, had resulted in a deadly hatred between the distiller and his son-in-law, who had boasted, could only be wiped out by blood.

"The trouble was not diminished any by the fact that Mrs. Bass left her husband and went to live with the daughter and her husband.

Todd had subsequently furnished information which led to the old man being tried on a charge of 'moon shining.'

"On the 10th, which was the day when the bad feeling reached its climax, Todd, his wife, Mrs. Bass, and a neighbor named Turner, boarded the train to take a trip. Just as the train was about to start, Bass, two of his brothers, and a friend entered the car.

As soon as Bass noticed his son-in-law, he drew a gun and fired at him. By actual count, there were seven shots exchanged, and as you may suppose, by the time the two men had finished their friendly encounter their audience had largely left them.

"That is, the audience, not the train. The population of the car where I was. None of the train dared to put their noses inside the door, for fear of getting hit. Bass-Todd continued to shoot at his own way.

"Suddenly our door opened again, and Mrs. Bass rushed in, her hair disheveled, her face pale as death, crying out, 'my husband will kill me because I left him.' In less time than it takes to tell it, every passenger in the car was under the seat in front of him.

"The expectation that Mrs. Bass would be immediately followed by her husband, who had been seen in the rear of the train, was given the audience, so far as possible, of the skin of the passengers who had been in the car.

A bright note suddenly passed through my head. I seized Mrs. Bass and showed her into the toilet room, telling her to lock the door.

In an instant the door opened again and the Bass party rushed in with pistols, on the warpath for the killing. Bass. They went through the car, but forgot to look in the toilet room, and Mrs. Bass was passed by. If she had been found in the car she would have died, and another was shot in the hand; Mrs. Todd received a shot in the hand accidentally from her husband's revolver.

"And as though all this wasn't enough, two hours after all the excitement took place we ran over a drunken man and his wife, who were on the same train, we had a collision with a section hand who was driving a baby mule, and both man and mule were killed instantly. I made up my mind that I had as much excitement as was good for my health, and when I was ready to leave Greenville I took another route home.

CHECKMATING THE SHARKS.

They Can No Longer Rob Claimants of the Government.

THE BEE'S GREAT BUREAU OF CLAIMS.

It Befriends Settlers, Patentees, Widows, Orphans and Soldiers and is Commended by the Highest Authority.

Men who have had claims against the government and employed professional agents to represent them before the departments in Washington, tell strange stories of tricks and rascality to which they were subjected.

There are, of course, some honest men among these agents; but there are so many that are notoriously corrupt, that it is almost impossible for a claimant, unless he be directed by a well-informed individual, to find one in whom he can place implicit confidence.

The Bee has received hundreds of complaints from soldiers and other who had advanced money when so desired and who waited for years and yet failed to receive any information as regards what the sharks had done with their money or claim.

The Bee has also been requested to recommend reliable agents and has, in this way, served to protect the people from fraud and rascality. But that is not all that the people who have been deceived by these sharks have done for the Bee.

There has been but one means left and that was to establish a great bureau of claims. This idea was suggested to a number of people but was put into practice first by the San Francisco Examiner.

"With the Examiner, the Bee has co-operated in the great work of affording relief to worthy claimants.
